MEMORANDUM FOR: Deputy Director for Plans

SUBJECT : Analysis of Items in the New York Times Affecting Components/Programs of the Science and Technology Directorate

1. In response to the request that the Science and Technology Directorate analyze line-by-line all items affecting programs in which components of this Directorate are involved, attached are copies of the evaluations made by the Office of Scientific Intelligence, the Office of Special Projects, the Office of Special Activities, the Office of Research and Development, the Office of Elint, the Office of Computer Services, the Foreign Missile and Space Analysis Center, and ☐

2. Detailed comments appear on all items and include, to the best of our ability, a statement concerning the possible effects on the intelligence production and operations activities of this Directorate. In many instances it is difficult to appraise the probable effects and therefore an indication of the possible results has been included.

3. The documents contained herein actually contain information of varying degrees of sensitivity and, in some cases, information which should be properly classified under one or more special security classifications. In order to render this compendium more readily usable, the over-all classification of the collection of documents has been established at the ☐ level and should be controlled by the recipient on a very strict
